

Blades Cutting-Up Wednesday

Junior Blades, nobody's favorite hockey team last season, will go into its fall training camp this Wednesday evening "very optimistically" according to local president Dave MacKay.

The reason for so much optimism surrounding the camp is that a 15-man hockey committee, headed by MacKay, has been working at building a team for the past month.

Putting the club through its stops and starts will be ex-juvenile boss Odie Lowe. And the club itself will probably have its best turnout in recent years. With contacts reaching into prairie camps and some B.C. centres, the committee hopes to put a team on ice than can hold its own with any in the Okanagan-Mainline area or the coast.

Back for another season with Blues will be speedster, Ivan Malinosky, while locally a host of juveniles are slated to move up into the elder ranks.

This year the Okanagan League will play an interlocking schedule with the Pacific Coast League with each team in each league playing a home-and-home two game series with each club in the other circuit.

Blades will entertain at home twice and will make one trip to Vancouver.

The schedule for the upcoming season is not yet drawn up but Blades are expected to launch themselves in the first weeks of October. Exhibition games are in the making with Calgary (Junior) Buf-falos, but are not yet finalized.

Blades hope to practice four times a week.
