L.A. offers Raiders attractive loan package

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Times says Oakland Raiders managing partner Al Davis has been offered a substantial financial package, including a $17 million loan with major tax breaks, to move the National Football League franchise to the Memorial Coliseum.

The newspaper quotes officials of Mayor Tom Bradley's administration as saying $13 million of the financial package offered by the Coliseum Commission would be used by the Raiders to build luxury box seats, practice fields and other facilities.

The remaining $4 million would be given to the Raiders for "relocation expenses" to be used at the team's discretion, The Times adds.

A major attraction of the deal is a provision giving the Raiders title to 99 luxury boxes in the Coliseum, along with the practice field, office space, training and locker-rooms and other facilities on the site of the 1932 Olympics swim stadium next to the Coliseum.

With the Raiders holding title, they could depreciate the cost of the improvements over the life of their contract with the Coliseum Commission, thus gaining a substantial tax writeoff, the newspaper adds.

Officials of the Oakland Coliseum, trying to keep the Raiders in the city, are reported to have offered the team an $8 million package, enough to pay for 64 luxury boxes.

The Raiders management was reviewing both offers, trying to decide which is the better deal, Oakland sources are quoted as saying.

A final question in the decision to move is whether the National Football League would fight a Raiders move from Oakland in court or try to settle the issue without a legal battle.

The Coliseum Commission has challenged the NFL rule requiring the approval of 21 of the 28 owners for a franchise shift.

A hearing on a Coliseum request Friday for a preliminary injunction to stop the NFL from applying that rule is scheduled for Feb. 4 in federal court here.

Jenkins planning to retire

ST. THOMAS, Ont. (CP) — Texas Rangers pitcher Fergie Jenkins said Monday night he will retire at the end of the 1981 baseball season when his two-year contract with the American League team expires.

"I'm not going to go any longer," the 36-year-old veteran of 15 major-league seasons told reporters prior to a charity banquet. "What I'm shooting for is 250 wins. Right now my total is 247 or 248."

Despite all his years in the majors, the Chatham, Ont., native has never been on a championship team.

"I want to be on a winner, who doesn't?" he said. "But if I don't, it won't bother me that much. I've enjoyed my years in pro ball and the sport has been good to me. Who would ask for more, except a World Series ring?"

Meanwhile, Bill Atkinson, another Chatham native, said he is elated at the thought of opening the 1980 season with Chicago White Sox.

Atkinson, 25, spent eight seasons in the Montreal Expos organization, splitting the last three years between the Expos and their AA farm club at Denver.
