Howe earns award

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Left-hander Steve Howe came up to Los Angeles Dodgers not even listed on the baseball club's roster and proceeded to become the National League's Rookie of the Year.

Howe, who was cool and collected during the season, yet even he was wise. Clyde said he didn't expect her 22-year-old husband to be in the big leagues this year.

Injuries to Terry Foster and Don Stanhouse left an opening in the Dodgers bullpen and Howe filled the bill to the extent that second baseman Dave Lopes said: "I think he was the most valuable player on the Dodgers team. He was our bullpen."

Howe, from the University of Michigan, posted an unimposing 57 record. But he has 17 saves, and that was most imposing.

"I'm not going out to the mound and be in awe of anyone," Howe said at a news conference celebrating his selection by the Baseball Writers' Association of America. "Almost everybody had expected Howe to be with the Dodgers' farm club at one stage or after he was 62 in San Antonio in 1979, his first year in organized baseball."

Howe gained 80 points in the BBWA voting to top Bill Gullickson of Montreal Expos, 53, and Lonnie Smith of Philadelphia Phillies, 49.
