Austrian downhill star returning to old form

SANTA CRISTINA, Italy (AP) - Franz Klammer, skiing's dethroned king of the downhill, still hopes to regain his lost crown and expects confidence he might succeed.

After two years of technical and psychological problems, during which he failed to score a single victory, the 27-year-old Austrian seems to have regained some of his past form.

He says a victory in one of the World Cup races "would be no surprise to me."

Although starting in the second group of skiers, he scored a 10th and a seventh in the two Cup downhills held in his Italian resort this week and said: "I am skiing much better than in the two previous seasons."

Austrian team-mates Harti Wehrather and Uli Spies finished one-two in Monday's race with last year's World Cup downhill champion, Peter Mueller of Switzerland, third.

Wehrather was clocked over the 2.160-metre course with a vertical drop of 710 metres, in one minute, 52.96 seconds.

Spies, who won the season's first race at Val d'Isere, France, two weeks ago to break total domination by the Canadian team, was second in 1:53.09 and Mueller was at 1:53.36.

ALTI TO PREACH
LONDON (AFP) - Muhammad Ali, former world heavyweight boxing champion, says he plans to preach peace throughout the world. Ali, 38, a Black Muslim, said he intends to spread the gospel of peace in China, the Soviet Union and in the Middle East to help bring an end to the Iran-Iraq war.

STEADY DECLINE
Klammer, whose career as a downhill racer peaked about four years ago, has been in a steady decline over the last couple of seasons because of some personal tragedies, including serious injuries suffered by his brother in a downhill training accident.

Klaus Klammer, now 29, was paralysed in a spill during a downhill race for juniors.

However, ski experts emphasize that some great downhill acts of the past, including Austrian Karl Schranz and Frenchman Guy Perillat, found success again when they were in their 30s and after years of failure.
